How to host a birthday dinner at a restaurant

Hosting a special celebration at a restaurant with incredible food, an awesome view and top notch staff is simply a no-brainer. It can often be more costly to throw a party at a restaurant, opposed to your home, but the clear benefits make it all worth it. Besides, your guests will be beyond impressed (especially if you listen to these three tips!) Start Communicating Early It's important to speak with the restaurant's special event coordinator and curate a menu with the chef and bartender. At Marker 32, we can create the menu perfect for your occasion. Cocktails and passing hors d'oeuvres? We've got it covered. A full six-course meal with an open bar? No problem. The earlier we hear from you and discuss the plans for your party, the more customized we can make the event. But if planning isn't your thing, there's no need to worry. Our on-staff coordinator will make sure everything's taken care of. Send Proper Invitations It's important to show your guests this is a party, not simply a get together over dinner. For a formal gathering, go for written invitations sent at least two weeks in advance. Not only will your grandma be proud of your old-fashioned courtesy, but your guests will understand the tone for the evening before they even arrive to the restaurant. Decide on the Food The restaurant manager or special event coordinator will work with you to create a perfect menu to please all of your guests. Working to plan the food in advance can do a great job of simplifying the planning and cutting down costs. We recommended choosing multiple appetizers and two or three main courses – one meat, one vegetarian and one fish. Don't break the cardinal rule of party planning and forget about certain food sensitivities! When it comes to desserts, you have nothing but flexibility. Everything from bringing your own cake for a birthday bash to rotating desserts on the table will be a great nightcap to your lovely evening. Set the Tone Head into the venue at least 30 minutes in advance to get the area ready for your party. It's a great idea to bring small floral arrangements, balloons or any other decor to achieve the look you're going for. If you plan on bringing candles, be sure to clear it with the restaurant first. Also, it's always a good idea to have a few open bottles of wine ready for the early birds, and possibly even some small appetizers. Take Care of the Tab You have a couple options here, so choose whichever works best for you. To make it easy, it's always a wise idea to pay the bill in advance and simply tell the restaurant to add any incidentals to your credit card afterward. If you do choose to pay the night of the event, speak with the maître d' while your guests are enjoying their dessert. These are the best ways to make sure your guests never even catch a glimpse of the bill. There are a million reasons to host your next party at Marker 32, but the ease of the experience might just take the cake. We have an incredible staff that does a great job of orchestrating the evening and making sure everything runs smoothly. When you're ready to get the ball rolling, contact us about menu options and pricing. We're so excited to be a part of your next event! Youngsters just wait for an occasion to celebrate and party hard. And if you have a reason to celebrate and you are planning a private party there is no place better than a restaurant. You can easily find the best private party restaurant in your area according to your gathering. Before you host a private party at a restaurant here are a few tips mentioned below to help you have a successful night: 1. Start planning about your party early because delaying the planning process will lead to delay in arrangements and eventually to incomplete preparations. 2. Now think about the reason you are hosting a party. Then decide if it is going to be a lunch or dinner and then start searching for the best restaurant according to your requirements. 3. See if you need a dance floor or not if you need a big table for lunch or dinner or you are good at small tables. Keep all these things in mind before you contact any restaurant or bar. 4. Shortlist 4 to 5 restaurants and visit each one of them to see the interiors in person and taste the food. Also, talk about the prices apart from checking their availability on the date and time you finalized. Once all this is done, book a restaurant for your private party. 5. Now, when you have picked up a restaurant, have a meeting with the owner to discuss details. Ask them questions like if you can bring a cake from outside, or if you can bring in some stuff for decoration, or you can get some drinks for the party? Clear everything you have in your head with the owner to avoid misunderstandings at the time of the party. 6. Finalizing a menu for the event is a must. Once you are done discussing the decorations, talk about the food because you cannot serve anything to your friends and family. 7. After the discussions are done and you free from worrying about the decoration part, and done with finalizing a menu, send an invitation to all your guests. Clearly mention the date, time, and venue for everyone's convenience. 8. For a perfect entertaining party, you can also plan some fun games. Keep prizes and rewards to excite your guests. 9. On the day of the party check the arrangements before the guests arrive. Keep in touch with the manager and waiters so that things go well. 10. And if you are satisfied with the party, don't forget to tip the staff for their good work. But if you are not in a mood to host a party in some restaurant and you want it to be happening at your home at a low budget, call the best event planner for all the arrangements. Keep some games for entertainment and be ready with some rock and roll music. And for the food part if you are a Chinese platter lover, go for Chinese order online. And with this, you are all set to enjoy the party at your home with your loved ones. Main content starts here, tab to start navigating With the holiday season fast approaching, many people will be looking to have parties and bring people together for work or personal celebrations. Hosting an event is easily done at your favorite restaurant. When doing so, there are many elements to make your gathering a success, and we at Tableside Italian Cook Shoppe would like to offer some tips and advice when getting reserving your private party at a fine dining venue.How to Plan a Restaurant Birthday Party DinnerPlan in Advance: Start your planning early. To ensure your party is a success, have the details planned well in advance as to where, time, day, etc. Before you contact the restaurant of your choice, have all of your questions prepared when catering to certain needs and booking your reservations.Do the Research: After the basic details have been pinned down, do your research on the restaurant. Find out how they seat private parties, the less busy days, parking accommodations and what an average crowd looks like as well as other accommodations you are looking for. Doing this will narrow down the venues you are considering for your event that will help you finalize the restaurant that is optimal for you.Know the Rules: Restaurants have to abide by the laws of the city and fire codes, so do not assume you have free rein. Discuss with the manager of the restaurant specifics of your gathering. Decorations, such as balloons, vases, and so on, gifts, food not served in house, like a cake or something along those lines. Let them know of how many people will be attending so they can staff their restaurant accordingly.Send out Blunt Invitations: When people decide to put together an event at a restaurant, some folks expect the people who are attending to chip in for their cost of the meal, drinks, or just a portion of their bill. Keep in mind that people will be confused with formal invitations that don't specify as it typically suggests the host is footing the bill. Be sure that it is clear that anyone attending know if they are responsible in any capacity for the bill.The menu: Doing dinner can be a big help to the chef if you minimize their menu to your guests to help them avoid making 20 different dishes at once. Select a few appetizers and have the served family style then offer your guests a reduced list of salads, soups, entrée and dessert options. To go the extra mile, print out the menus with wine pairings in advance for your people. Communicate with the staff regarding any special needs or other important details.You are the Host: Don't forget you are the host and your responsibility is to ensure the party runs smoothly from start to finish. For example, avoid getting drunk before the salad is even served. Make sure introductions are made if people in your party do not know each other. Help your guests feel comfortable, offer them a seat and information where jackets and purses be placed along with other items that may have been brought to the party. Point out where the bathroom is and provide details of an after-party if that is a part of the evening.Tip Generously: Reward the staff with a generous tip after your party has successfully been completed. Be sure to pay your bill in a timely manner. If you want to go the extra mile, servers and other staff members will appreciate a handwritten thank-you note a few days following your party. Developing a good relationship with your favorite restaurant can help you book future events.Private Parties & Events in East Village, New YorkAt Tableside Italian Cook Shoppe, we offer private party accommodations to help you make your event a memorable and enjoyable time for you and your guests filled with fine Italian food, exquisite cocktails, and mouthwatering desserts.
